First Year: Students are required to earn six credits in each of the thematic modules, four in each of the skills-oriented modules and four in the project-oriented module. All courses in the first year are mandatory. This year is considered the “What?” year, in which courses focus on the concepts and disciplinary approaches in each subject area.

Second Year: Students are required to earn a minimum of four credits in each module. Up to twelve credits are earned through mandatory courses. This year is considered the “How?” year, in which courses are problem-oriented and focus on methodologies.

Third Year: Students are required to earn a minimum of four credits in each module. This year is considered the “Why?” year, in which courses focus on analysis. The third year is also when students have the opportunity to study abroad.

Fourth Year: Students are required to take a minimum of 30 credits. In addition to the thesis and thesis seminar, students take courses in their major and open electives. Students pursuing a major are required to take the Major module, comprising 10 credits in their major, and a minimum of 8 credits of electives (these can be courses from other majors, or from years 2 or 3 of the program). Students may also choose to double major, in which case they will take 10 credits of courses in one major and a minimum of 8 credits of courses in the other. Students who are not pursuing a major are required to take 20 credits from designated electives in majors, or from year 2 or 3 electives, complete a thesis, but cannot complete a Capstone project. This year focuses on specialization through choosing a major and completing a thesis and capstone, as well as what's next after completing the BA.

Thesis and Capstone:

The thesis and capstone requirements are unified across all the BA programs at CEU. Please refer to the Undergraduate thesis guidelines (forthcoming) for specific information regarding requirements.

Program Majors

Students will be required to declare their intended major in the second year, this is a prerequisite for studying abroad. The major can be changed and/or a second major can be declared until the end of Fall Term in the third year. Students in good academic standing at the end of their third year are eligible to take MA classes that count towards their major in addition to relevant BA coursework. For the complete list and descriptions of majors and minors see page 8-10.

Major Credit requirements:

To complete a major, students must earn a total of 36 credits:

- 16 total credits from courses in the major taken during Year 2 and Year 3; at least 6 credits must be taken in the major per year
- 20 credits in the major during the fourth year, including:
 - 10 credits of 4th year courses in the major
 - Thesis courses, which include the Thesis Seminar, the Careers Course, and The Thesis (and Capstone) completion
- The thesis (and capstone) must be completed within the field of the major
- Mandatory courses do not count towards the major

For students wishing to double major:

- Same requirements as above for Year 2 and Year 3 for each major (16 credits for major A and 16 additional credits for major B)
 - Course credits may only count towards one major (i.e., if an offered course falls into two different major subjects, it may only be counted towards one of them)
 - The thesis must be interdisciplinary and incorporate topics from both majors.

- In Year 4:
 - 10 credits of 4th year courses in one major
 - 8-10 credits of 4th year courses in the second major
 - Once again, courses must be unique, i.e., the credits of one course cannot be counted towards 2 majors
 - The thesis (and capstone) must be interdisciplinary and cover both majors.

Minor Credit Requirements

- 16 credits of courses in the minor throughout years 2-4

Second Year Experiential Learning

Students in the BA must spend a spring term pursuing an experiential learning module. Experiential learning enables students to be immersed in an organization, or project, outside university coursework, in which students learn how contemporary work, and collaborative projects are organized. Students will have the opportunities to pursue internships, partnerships, or research assistantships, with institutions such as NGO's, museums, businesses, professionals, international organizations, social or political movements, community groups, or with individuals such as activists, artists, scientific researchers, or experts. The Experiential Learning module comprises two distinct parts – a practical component in which students individually pursue a practical project related to their academic or career interests and a seminar in which students will be expected to share and reflect on their experiences completing the project. Please refer to the Experiential Learning Annex for detailed information about the component.

Learning Outcomes:

Upon completion of this module, students will be able to:

- Identify an experiential learning setting of interest
- Decipher how an organization, practice, or profession works
- Apply communication skills outside the classroom
- Plan and complete projects
- Work in a team
- Reflect upon feedback from others
- Clarify their career aspirations
- Analyse the experiential site in relation to previous coursework

Program Modules

The Culture, Politics, and Society Program consists of modules, from which students are required to draw their courses over the course of the four-year program. Modules are completed successfully once students have passed the mandatory and elective courses in the module.

The modules in the CPS program are:

Module	Description
Year 1
Culture and Self I 6 Credits	The module aggregates courses which – in spite of their diverse disciplinary origins – are all focused on the perception and understanding of selfhood and personal identity, and the ways these are shaped by and practiced in different cultures.
Society and Culture I 6 Credits	This module introduces students to the basic understanding of what is society, what is modernity, what are the fundamental social categories which organize social and cultural life, and what are today's primary social challenges, such as inequality and environmental change.
Politics and Society I 6 Credits	This module is constituted by courses introducing students to a variety of perspectives on politics - past and present, national, international and transnational - in their relation to the broader social world.
Modes of Interpretation I 4 Credits	The module develops students' capacity to read and interpret multiple textual genres, ranging from traditional written texts, to visual data and media such as painting, sculpture, photography, film, and digital media.
Modes of Expression I 4 Credits	This introductory module comprises two mandatory courses, one on academic writing, and the other on communicating through image and sound.
Culture, Politics, and Society in Context I 4 Credits	Drawing upon the city of Vienna, the surrounding region, or neighboring cities, as sites for learning, this module takes students out of the classroom to vividly connect coursework to the past and present of the city, its institutions, and its surroundings.

Year 2
Culture and Self II min. 4 Credits	This module is constituted by courses from various disciplines focused on the practices and ideas about selfhood and personal identity as these are manifested in diverse cultures.
Society and Culture II min. 4 Credits	This interdisciplinary module is constituted by courses introducing students to the various ways of studying social and cultural wholes and social forces. Students learn how the social sciences are a way of knowing, with debates not only about the central social categories structuring social life, but also debates within the social sciences about how to best understand the social world.
Politics and Society II min. 4 Credits	This interdisciplinary module puts together courses that advance students' understanding of the activity of politics and the variety of political orders, past and present.
Modes of Interpretation II min. 4 Credits	This module advances students' critical interpretive capacities by focusing on the components that construct a text or media artefact, and the components that construct a research question.
Modes of Expression II min. 4 Credits	In this module students will select a minimum of two courses among a range of elective courses which are each devoted to gaining basic proficiency in a single medium, from video to photo, audio, creative writing, data visualization, or coding.
Culture, Politics, and Society in Context II min. 4 Credits	Students must spend a spring term pursuing an experiential learning module, enabling students to be immersed in an organization, or project, outside university coursework, in which students learn how contemporary work, and collaborative projects are organized.
Year 3
Culture and Self III min. 4 Credits	This module continues exploring the practices of selfhood and personal identity from a variety of disciplinary perspectives, while concentrating on developing students' analytical skills.
Society and Culture III min. 4 Credits	This module trains students to formulate their own questions, to embark on their own analyses of the social world, and to consider if, and how, to act upon the social world.
Politics and Society III	This module focuses on developing students' analytical skills

min. 4 Credits	by considering questions of agency, normative frameworks, social contexts, and institutional settings.
Modes of Interpretation III min. 4 Credits	The module develops students' capacity to critically analyze research, media, and texts, by linking interpretative strategies to fundamental questions in the social sciences, humanities, and media studies, on establishing causality, the broader history and effects of media, and the gaps between argument, evidence, and establishing a fact.
Modes of Expression III min. 4 Credits	Students will have the opportunity to take advanced courses in a given medium, such as coding or filmmaking, while also continuing to take basic courses from a variety of media, gaining a broader basic proficiency across disciplines as well.
Year 4
Major Module min. 10 Credits	This module is required for students who choose to pursue a major, and offers advanced, specialized study in a specific discipline, leading into their final Thesis (and capstone projects). Students gain disciplinary expertise, formulate their own research questions to pursue, and undertake significant research.
General Studies Module 20 Credits	Students are empowered to design their own course of study from a limited number of MA courses, as well as second- & third-year electives.
Thesis and Capstone Module min. 10 Credits	Throughout the module, students complete a culminating undergraduate academic project that derives from previous work in their field.

All BA students are required to complete a thesis regardless of whether they are following a major or the general studies path.
